PRINCIPLES

- Our approach to solve the social backlog is like the one we have for entrepreneurial activity. First, identify and find the right solutions. Second, contribute all the resources required to solve the problem. This approach is different from the first one; that is, to provide resources and then see how they are used.
- Modern society is supported in the wellbeing of others and thus the best investment is to fight poverty.
- Many of the social problems are more effectively taken care of when the foundations have the support of the companies' infrastructure.
- Businessmen are temporary managers of wealth. Their function is to manage it efficiently, create jobs and pay taxes; all of them have an impact on the economy of its society.
- Use the expertise and entrepreneurial talent to solve society's problems. We are used to make important decisions, generate new ideas, solve problems and take risks.
- Charity helps and attenuates poverty, but does not solve it.

"Poverty is fought with health, education and, above all, employment and more employment".

- CARLOS SLIM HELÚ

HEALTH

The poverty, ignorance and inequality conditions that affect some of the segments of the population foster that persons accused of committing a misdemeanor, may not have access to the benefit of being free on bail although they have the right to it, because they lack the necessary economic resources. In order for people to obtain a bail, they have to meet the following requirements: they must not have a criminal record and they have only committed misdemeanors. In addition, with the support given by CARLOS SLIM FOUNDATION to the Re-education Therapeutic Community, there is a special attention program for young offenders between 15 and 18 years old.

The Social Justice program supports its beneficiaries in their reintegration to their families, to productive activities and to society with new tools for life, through human development courses and professional psychological help. In this manner, the objective is to try to avoid that, because they committed misdemeanors, there would be a big social cost that would impact the person, his or her family and also society at large, due to the effects caused by family disintegration. A significant number of the beneficiaries of this program are indigenous persons living in poverty conditions.

CASA VECINA (Neighbor's house)

Is the cultural space of the Fundación del Centro Histórico de la Ciudad de México, A.C. It conceives itself as a specialized laboratory in production, mounting and research of contemporary art, not as a traditional exhibition space. It works based on the "studio" format, understanding that the mounting of exhibitions is a continuous experimentation process. Thus, its objective is not to present finished artistic products, but rather provide the necessary infrastructure and financing to collaborate with the investigation of invited artists. The projects they support become part of the Documentation Center archive, which also offers bibliography and specialized magazines. Casa Vecina (Neighbor's house) attempts to become an encounter and dialogue space with several communities based on its research and link programs, and it is also a kind entrance to find contemporary art.
